BOUNDING around the basketball court in their size 14 shoes, Dunsborough twins Sam (left) and Tom Fossati (15), are a pretty formidable duo.

The brothers, who have been playing basketball since they were 10, are natural-born basketballers.

At well over six foot, they've already made a big impact at local and state levels.

Their profile has recently gone up a notch with their selection in the WA Country squad that will compete in the Under-18 National Basketball Championships in Gawler, South Australia later this week.

Both Sam and Tom were awarded with basketball scholarships from the South West Academy of Sport last year and they also received additional training through an intensive training program run by the Australian Institute of Sport.

These Year-11 students from MacKillop College are dedicated to their basketball, and with the support of mum, Kellie, they are reaching for their dreams.

Having just been part of the winning team in the local A-grade competition, they now have their sights set on victory at the national championships.
